

(1-2) . . . in Egyptian, Kn . . . ; . . . in Greek, the great (?) modeller . . .

(3-4) And having modeled two bulls, equal . . . and their natures masculine and . . .

(5-11) And having shaped another . . . [let it have] the body of a snake which has [no tail? or, more than one head?], but [is two- or three-headed?] at either end, [having on the right?] the heads of men, [on the left?] the heads of geese, . . . golden wings (?) which have . . . the shapes . . .

(11-15) [And having modeled another?] which has the body of . . . of the face of a sea(?) hawk . . . in Egyptian . . . subtle interpretations (?) . . .